

Loosening FCC regulations and thereby allowing large media companies to dominate the market is not in the public interest. The media should represent the diversity of interests and views that exist in society, not the interests and views of a few corporate concerns.

It is already becoming increasingly difficult to find independent media outlets in any part of the country. Any further concentration of media ownership would be monopolistic and clearly undemocratic.

The FCC should serve public, not private interests.

I urge you to retain the current ownership rules when the issue comes to a vote on June 2nd.

Sincerely,

Andrea Zuc
